

BERLINS TO HAVE CATHOLIC WEDDING TOMORROW AS MACKAY PEACE MOVE

Wife Wants Baby To Be Born in The Roman Faith

Irving Berlin, Jewish song writer, and the former Ellin Mackay, a Roman Catholic, will be married again tomorrow in the Church of St. Jean De Baptiste, 76th Street and Lexington Avenue, according to the United Press.

At the rectory of the church it was said that no arrangements for such a ceremony had been made, nor was anything known concerning it. The United Press office was informed by one of the priests attached to the parish that the wedding would take place, while another later denied it.

Keep in Seclusion

Berlin and his bride, united on January 4 last by a civil ceremony, could not be located today, and it is believed they have slipped out of the city.

Although friends of Mrs. Berlin declare emphatically that she intends to be married once more, this time in the faith in which she was reared, the Rev. Francis A. McIntyre, secretary to Cardinal Hayes, said today that no application had been made by the couple for a special dispensation. He was asked if such permission would be granted if requested.

"Under certain conditions the church can recognize mixed marriages," the priest replied.

Hayes Out of City

Cardinal Hayes, it was learned, is out of the city, and a report is current that the application has been made directly to him.

According to one close to the Berlins, Mrs. Berlin for some time has been considering this step as a means of pacifying her multimillionaire father, Clarence H. Mackay, who bitterly opposed her marriage. It was pointed out that Mrs. Berlin always has been a faithful communicant of the church, and took a great deal of pleasure in observing its tenets.

Necessarily, since her estrangement from both the church and Judaism, the faith of his fathers, her father, Ellin Berlin's life has been tinged with unhappiness, in spite of the love which Berlin, her Jewish husband, bore her. Friends of the song writer say he would do anything within his power to make her happy, and declare that he already has acquiesced in her desire for a remarriage.

Of course, Berlin consistently has denied the report since he returned with his wife from their European honeymoon. To admit that it was true would mean more publicity of an unpleasant nature, which might once more incur the displeasure of his stern and hitherto unrelenting father-in-law.

Berlin, the day preceding his marriage, denied he would ever wed Ellin Mackay. Before he went to Europe, he denied he would go. When he arrived at the Grand Central terminal on his return, he took great pains to dis-

Youth Who Killed Tutor, Insane, Going to Asylum

Manuel Silberstein, 19 year old student who killed James H. Calisch, elderly philosopher and psychologist who instructed him in the intricate reasonings of Kant and the sex theories of Freud, has been found hopelessly insane and will be committed to Matteawan Asylum, it was learned today.

Behind this announcement lies the tragic story of a brilliant youth who burned up his mental energies in prodigious study, finally to turn upon the man who had tutored him.

The youth's father, Louis Silberstein, goes about his tailor shop, at 1358 57th St., in unhappy bewilderment at the fate of his brilliant son.

Manuel has been freed from the straitjacket, but still, alternately laughing and weeping, persists that Calisch wrecked his life.

Planned Killing a Year

Silberstein says he made up his mind a year ago to kill Calisch. And it is probable that the old man knew he was slated for death at the hands of a monster he had, however unwittingly, himself created. He had intimated to his landlady that he would soon go to join Rudolph Valentino.

Silberstein struggled against the delusions which filled his brain after, as a physician put it, "his mental energies 'petered out' and deterioration set in."

He had been to sea, and returned in no way freed from the terrible realization that his mental powers had gone. He sought refuge in work—only to find himself unable to concentrate. It was then that his diseased mind set about finding some one to play the role of an evil influence. And he again thought of his teacher, and he bought a hammer. . . .

Lover's Lane Frequenters Help Build Case Against Hall Murder Prisoners

SOMERVILLE, Aug. 31.—A connected story of what the state believes occurred four years ago under a crab apple tree on the Phillips farm when Rev. Edward W. Hall and his love plaything, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, met death, will be ready for the grand jury when that body begins its session the third Tuesday in September, prosecution officials announced today.

American Fights For Seat in Plane To Cross Atlantic

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Aug. 31.—Capt. Homer M. Berry, United States army pilot, who maintains that he was promised a place as one of the pilots on the Sikorsky biplane scheduled to fly from New York to Paris this summer, declared today that The Argonauts, an organization which has financed the flight, will defend his claims.

Capt. Rene Fonck, French ace, who, it was understood, is to be commander in the proposed flight, was told that Capt. Berry had declared that Fonck's contract with the Argonauts naming him as pilot with permission to choose the crew, expired last Saturday, Fonck remarked:

"The best thing for Capt. Berry to do is to shut up."

Capt. Berry said Col. H. E. Hartney, general manager of the Argonauts, had assured him of the support of that organization in his fight to get a seat in the trans-Atlantic plane.

The Sikorsky Manufacturing Company controls the airplane itself, Capt. Berry said, but Col. Hartney has control of the three Gnome-Rhone-Jupiter motors, although Capt. Fonck has frequently declared that the three motors in the airplane were the property of the French government. The motors came here billed to Col. Hartney, according to Capt. Berry, at the regular list price. Col. Hartney was obliged to put up a bond for $27,000 for their release.

Love-Makers to Testify

A number of the new witnesses on whom the state depends for evidence corroborative of the tale told by Mrs. Jane Gibson, famous "pig woman," are men and women who were worshiping, perhaps indiscreetly, at the shrine of Aphrodite in the Phillips orchard, notorious rendezvous for New Brunswick lovers.

One of these witnesses has come forward in a city twelve hours distant by rail, according to investigators, and has told a story which corroborated that of Mrs. Gibson in every detail.

At the same time investigators, despite renewed interest in mystery witnesses, were not neglecting the possibilities of fingerprints, despite the doubt cast upon the identification of Willie Stevens's.

Seek Print on Clothing

Every available article of clothing worn by the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills will be gone over for possible prints, Special Prosecutor Alexander W. Simpson announced today.

Willie Stevens and his cousin, Henry Carpender, continue to occupy separate cells in the county jail here, while Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, also charged with the double murder, lives quietly at her luxurious New Brunswick home, at liberty under $15,000 bail.

5,000 'Villagers' Appeal Against Eviction by City

Greenwich Village, or at least the lower part of it, is less joyous today than is its wont; and "self-expression" has taken on an entirely new character.

It all comes about through an order from the city, which directly effects about 5,000 residents and shopkeepers, to move, bag and baggage, in order that work may proceed on the extension of 6th Avenue, from Carmine to Laight Street, to furnish an approach to the Holland Tunnel to New Jersey.

Unless some stay is granted many hundreds of families, most of them Italians with little money, will have to move today or face eviction.

At 11 o'clock this morning a committee of twenty-five, headed by Julius Moscovitz, a clothier of 227 Bleecker St., will call on Controller Charles W. Berry to request a thirty-day extension of the time set by the Finance Department for removal.

One of the buildings slated for destruction is the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Pompeii, 210 Bleecker St.
